

Montacute Pavilion Daylesford

Bespoke honeymoon retreat

Montacute Pavilion Daylesford is the region's most architecturally significant new getaway, a dramatic and intriguing building inspired by a Baroque banqueting pavilion in the gardens of Montacute House, Somerset, England. It is nestled within one of the most outstanding private gardens in Daylesford. From the moment you enter the carport, and the roller door comes down you are immediately transported into another world. A garden path takes you past magnificent 150-year-old chestnut trees, listed on the significant tree register, to the entrance of this private and stunning hideaway. Antique and modern furnishings are skillfully used to create a one-off luxury pavilion for up to four, with a bedroom and bathroom on each floor. It can be used as a spacious retreat for one couple, or as two private spaces for two couples, friends or families, one on each floor. Downstairs has been designed with nods to the Arts and Crafts movement of the early 20th century, with an eclectic mix of antique and contemporary European furnishings, including antique Indian columns, Persian rugs, bespoke light fittings, a gas log fire and TV, and a window seat covered in William Morris fabric for cosy days and nights looking into the garden or enjoying the fire. There is a fully-equipped kitchen with washer-dryer and antique dining table.
